

DROPS DEAD IN ORLAND PARK DEPOT

Ernest Knoop Veteran Wabash Employee Stricken Suddenly

Ernest Knoop, age fifty years, who has been in the employ of the Wabash railroad at Orland Park as a section hand for the past 18 years, died of a sudden heart attack in the Wabash depot in Orland Park last Saturday night about 6 o'clock.

He had been complaining of pains in his chest, but within the last few days had told his friends he had never felt better in his life.

Mrs. Carl Quigley had just brought supper to her husband who is night operator, when Mr. Knoop came into the waiting room and spoke to them. Shortly afterward Mrs. Quigley heard a gasping sound in the waiting room and the sound of some object falling on the floor. Calling her husband's attention to this she turned on the waiting room lights and when Mr. Quigley ran into the waiting room he found Mr. Knoop leaning back in a seat stretched out. He gasped a few times and was dead. A pipe he had been smoking fell to the floor when the sudden heart attack seized him.

The deceased was born December 12, 1885, in Germany and while a young man he came to this country with three sisters, two of whom reside in Chicago and one sister, Mrs. Martha Mishlick resides in Blue Island.

After a short period of residence in Palos, the deceased came to Orland Park in 1918 and entered the employ of the Wabash railroad as section hand and worked for the local section foreman, Ollie Anderson ever since.

He left a $1000 life insurance policy to his sister in Blue Island. He was a single man and had boarded at the Joe Reilly home for the past eleven years.

Funeral services, which were quite largely attended by many Orland people, were held Tuesday afternoon from the Hallinan Funeral Parlors in Blue Island. There were several pretty floral pieces from Orland, among them being one from his fellow workers on the Wabash railroad.

Burial took place in the Oak Hill cemetery.

Missouri Couple Married In Mokena Christmas Day

Christmas Day a young couple came to Mokena seeking a minister to marry them. They said they were from Gorin, Missouri. The bride was a school teacher, the groom a truck driver. They had eloped and sought to keep their marriage quiet for fear the school board of that town might dismiss the bride if they found out that she was married. They secured the marriage license in Joliet and managed to have the county clerk keep the issuance of the license out of the papers.

When they arrived in Mokena and asked for a minister to tie the knot, Whitney Carter, night operator at the Rock Island depot in Mokena directed them to the home of the Rev. Carlton French, pastor of the Mokena M.E. church who performed the wedding ceremony at his home Christmas night, and the young couple went on their way rejoicing.

Frankfort Flasher Case Coming Up

About a year ago, the Michigan Central railroad operating thru Frankfort was ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission to place flashers at the crossing east of the depot in Frankfort, but the company has failed to do so.

Mayor George Sangmeister of Frankfort has been very active in bringing the matter to a head with the result that the matter will come up in the Will County Circuit Court before Judge Edwin Wilson this week. The railroad company is contesting the case and if they lose, it is said they may carry the case to the supreme court.

Balmy Weather

The balmy spring-like weather of the past week is causing the grass to turn green and a spring-like feeling is existing.

In commenting on this warm weather, Ben Tewes, who conducts the hardware store in Mokena says that if this kind of weather continues he will have to advertise specials on lawn mowers instead of winter merchandise.

CHICAGO COUPE CRASHES INTO MOKENA CAR

Sunday evening about 7:15 o'clock Harold Warning of Mokena figured in an auto crash. He had his car parked in front of the Henry Stelwagen filling station in Mokena and just as he started his car and was making a left turn in the street in front of the filling station, another car, a new Ford coupe driven by Charles Culver of Chicago, crashed into Warning's car.

Culver claimed Warning had no lights on his car and that he failed to see the car until he was so close that he could not stop.

The front end of the Ford was quite badly damaged, while the Warning car was only slightly damaged.

Riding with Culver was Miss Gratten of Mokena. The suddenly impact pitched her forward and her head struck the wind shield. She suffered painful injuries about the nose and face. Luckily the wind shield was of shatter-proof glass, which however was badly cracked.

Neither auto driver had any accident insurance.

Weighty Legislation Is Coming Up Soon

As the 60th regular session of the Illinois Legislature approaches I take this opportunity to again call the attention of our people to the importance of keeping informed on the various subjects that are to come before the members.

One matter which will be brought up with promptness is the question of control of the administering of relief in its various phases, direct, blind and dependent children. This is vital because it involves changes in our structure of government in that it removes government farther from the people and places it in hands of a few in a remote place.

Most people do not realize that the provisions of the Social Security Act are to the effect that the rules and standards are to be set up in Washington and in order that the states may share in Federal aid for unemployed insurance and other forms of economic insurance, the state legislatures are to be required to give up much in state rights. Efforts will be made by admirers of our present form of government, to break down these rulings. Our members in Congress will be asked to help and if we can secure sufficient aid there, it will make the work of the state legislatures less difficult.

The plan seems to be to establish thruout the country a system of relief under direction of social welfare workers with headquarters in Washington similar to that experienced under the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, now almost defunct but struggling to be re-instated. The controversy in Springfield will for some time hinge on this point and its results will have far reaching significance. Only recently a speaker in this district, representing the professional social service worker, advised hearers that the wisdom of the legislature was questionable in permitting this handling of relief to rest with the boards of county supervisors. As we proceed we find that every unit of local government is on trial. Certainly, at such a time, it is not too much to expect the people to inform themselves.

One of the best ways, is to organize Forums or town hall meetings for discussion of both sides of the question. A committee could be formed to make the arrangements and open discussion might be had.

The writer will furnish copies of bills to such groups as they are introduced. I consider this one of the most important questions which is my reason for listing it first.

Of course, as the session progresses many other matters of a controversial nature will be before the members and among others will be the drivers license bill with its accompanying financial responsibility angle. This needs careful study. There is both good and bad in the proposition and whichever is best for the state, should prevail, but no stampeding of any bill should be permitted by the people.

The matter of taxes is among the most important of all matters just now when the people are struggling with all they can handle in this connection. The disposition of the state's income in such way as to ease the tax burden, should have careful consideration. The schools are going to ask for more and that is a matter that should have the

Interesting High Lights On Recent Texas Centennial

Dear Editor: Since hitch-hiking from the south, where Mrs. Hall and I were associated with the Dallas Texas Centennial Celebration, the question, following cordial greetings from friends, was almost invariably, "How did the Dallas Fair compare with the 'Century of Progress' at Chicago?"

The answer, in brief, is that never in the history of Exhibits, past or present, has there been a more wonderful, resplendent or magnificently impressive presentation, than the 1936 show on the lake front at Chicago, replete with everything that pictured 100 years of progress in science, art, literature and all that human ingenuity has been capable of accomplishing.

The 'Dallas Texas Centennial' was presented as the commemoration of a series of important events in the history of Texas, having accrued 100 years or more ago, and as a historical pageant, the principal features 'The Cavalcade of Texas' could not be surpassed.

As for the Fair in general, it was a condensed presentation of the wonder of modern architectural skill and conception of beauty and effectiveness in building, lighting and effects, which instantly filled the mind of the visitor with awe and admiration. Ample funds for permanent construction made much of this possible.

At this time, I will not attempt to enter into details regarding either, but will only say, "The Century of Progress" massive in its proportions and assembling of characters and characteristic features can never be equaled or surpassed. The 'Dallas Texas Exposition' will always be remembered as a permanent monument to capable thought, and a glowing triumph in constructive ability.

The 'Dallas Texas Exposition', because of its permanences, will go on and on to greater achievement advantages of the timely coalition and next year, 1937 on the same ground. "The Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition" will take of America's North and South and the countries between, to present to the world a most comprehensive and capable amalgamation of typical and historically correct features covering the entire scope of intellectuality and freedom from restraint in the activities of the peoples of all Western Hemisphere countries past and present, from the northern horizon to the southern extremity of South America.

"The Century of Progress," as an exhibit, has vanished from the lake front in Chicago. The 'Dallas Texas Centennial' is entering the most important field of its cycle, and millions shall see, enjoy and learn from it. Chicago subtracted in 1934. Dallas will add in 1937.

Annual Meeting

The Mokena Local of the Pure Milk Association held their annual meeting in the St. John Evangelical church parlors Tuesday night. An oyster supper was served. Mr. Cosgrove, in charge of the publicity department of the Association, was the principal speaker of the evening.

Most searching analysis by the people.

I mention only a few of the problems that are to come up in Springfield in January to illustrate the great need of the full discussion and information on same on the part of the people. After the questions have been considered by the electorate, their representatives should hear from them and in order to complete the record a report on the vote on roll call of local members should be available for the district papers.

From time to time, during my term in Springfield, I have submitted comments on matters of interest and with the gracious response of the papers have been able to reach the people and have received their reaction.

As time goes on and with the continued cooperation of the papers, I shall have pleasure in proceeding in like manner during the coming session. My final appeal is, that you watch the legislature and help to run your town business through your elected servants.

My New Year wish, is that those elected may be able to show the statesmanship desired at this time, able of encompassing.

Miss Eva Jean Pfaff of Frankfort Is A Holiday Bride

A very informal, but pretty wedding took place in the spacious living room of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Pfaff on the evening of Dec. 26th, when their daughter Eva Jean became the bride of Mr. Ovid L. Maples of Indianapolis, Ind. At 7:30 p. m. the appointed time for the ceremony, Mr. Arthur Lambrecht sang "I Love You Truly" accompanied by Mr. Robert Garden of Chicago, then as the beautiful strains of Lohengrins' Wedding March were played, the bridal party took their places at the improvised altar in front of the fireplace, where tall white tapers were flaming on the mantel. Rev. C. F. Shellhase performed the ceremony and following that, Mr. Lambrecht sang "Because."

The bride was attired in a very simple, dark wine velvet gown and wore a cascade of white orchids, with a touch of color in them matching her gown. The maid of honor, Miss Margaret Full of Hinsdale, Ill., wore a crystal blue velvet gown, with a cascade of rose colored orchids. Mr. Ervin Stupeck of Chicago was best man. A reception followed and a buffet lunch was served. Miss Lolita Bettenhausen of Joliet and Miss Mary Louise Laird of Joliet poured. There were about 50 guests present, including out of town guests from Hinsdale, Chicago, Springfield, Pontiac, Lockport, and Joliet. Mr. and Mrs. Maples departed early in the evening for Indianapolis. The bride's traveling suit was of pine green wool, with a three-quarter length, dark brown lapin swager coat, matching accessories were dark brown. Their relatives and friends wish them much happiness. Mr. Maples is employed by General Motors as an Insurance Adjuster.

This Hot Dog Was Not In A Sandwich

We often hear the expression "hot dog" but here is a real story about a really "hot dog" and he was not in a sandwich either.

Early Tuesday morning the family of Jack Nezinski, residing in the south Elmore sub-division south of Tinley Park, was awakened by the cries of their ten months old Pomeranian dog. When members of the family got up to see what the trouble was, they found the dog in flames. A rug was tossed over him and the fire was quickly smothered. He was taken to an animal hospital in Chicago where the veterinarians say he will recover.

The dog had been lying near an oil heater so that his fur became ignited.

By a chance that rarely favors desperate measures, Denison sprawled from the final leap across the bridge gap into a fringe of sand and willows that overgrew the eastern bridge approach.

Threading the undergrowth on his trembling horse, Denison got away from the bridge as fast as he could; somebody was still throwing rifle slugs toward it; but once away from the danger point, he lost no time in making himself heard. Out on the old trail the steers, alarmed by the shooting, and worried secretly by the two Indians, were milling, and McCrossen, shouting and cursing, was trying to bring order out of the confusion.

Denison, from the willows, called loudly, "Who's driving these cattle?" "The man that owns 'em," shouted McCrossen, riding out into the open, fifty yards away. "Who the hell are you, hidin' in that brush? If you're a man, show yourself."

Denison pushed into the open. "You're driving this bunch, McCrossen?"

"I am. What do you want, Denison?" he demanded angrily.

"I want these steers, McCrossen. And I want you."

"These steers belong to me for wages, an' I've got twice as many back there yet. Now I've got just one word for you, Denison: Get out of my way an' keep out of my way."

"If you've got any rights in these cattle, turn 'em back to the Meadows and lay your claim for wages before the Stockmen's Claims Board," retorted Denison.

"What the hell's all this to you? Do you claim 'em?" demanded McCrossen savagely.

"I don't claim a hoof, but I want to talk with you, McCrossen, before you jump to the Panhandle."

"What about?"

"About who fired my ranch house and about Henry Sawdy."

"Tryin' to pick a quarrel with me, eh, Denison? Well, you needn't try very hard. I don't like you, Denison. I never did. I never had any use for you. Now will you pull off these bumps that are millin' my steers?"

"Will you head 'em back for the Meadows and talk to me?"

"No!"

"No!"

The two refusals were fast. But while the second was being uttered, Rebstock cried, "Crowd him, Dave!" and fired at Denison.

The next instant three horsemen were plunging at one another on rearing horses and throwing their shots at one another in a very uncertain light.

Retreat was out of the thinking. Denison, caught between the two men, was forced to divide his fire. With a blow stinging his left arm, he jumped his horse past the two, whirled, and came back outside, with McCrossen shooting at him fast. The maneuver of Denison's put McCrossen into Rebstock's line of fire.

But hardly had Denison whirled when he felt a sickening blow in the stomach from McCrossen's gun, hardly ten yards away. He had been crouching on his horse's back and was already stirrup-loose. He slid off and rolled like a cat toward the brush. Rebstock saw the trick but, forgetting that a wounded man is the most dangerous man, he yelled and spurred straight at him.

The horse refused the smell of blood. He shied. Rebstock spurred him. As the horse reared, the feeble light of the moon struck, for an instant, Rebstock's features. In that instant Denison fired point-blank at him.

The blow was terrible. Rebstock's arms jerked high, and his gun flew into the air. He sprang convulsively upward, toppled and, as his frightened horse whirled, lurched from the saddle to the ground. He never spoke again.

Fully expecting that McCrossen would ride in to finish him, Denison flipped open the loading gate of his gun instinctively, and punched out the empty shells.

His head in a whirl, expecting that any instant McCrossen would be on him, Denison tried to reload. Just as he got the cartridge into his revolver, he caught the sound of a horse's hoofs and then heard Bob Scott calling.

"Here, Bob," exclaimed Denison from the brush. "Look out for McCrossen."

Scott slipped off his horse. "McCrossen won't bother for a while. Are you hit, Bill?"

"I stopped a couple of slugs somehow. What about McCrossen?" he asked irritably.

"He's lyin' over by the bridge. He wants to talk to you, Bill."

"Twist a tourniquet around this arm before I try it, Bob. Don't trust McCrossen. Have you got his guns? He'd like nothing better than another crack at me," muttered Denison, staggering, with Scott's help, to his feet.

"McCrossen's stripped clean," declared Scott. "He's dyin'. That's the plain truth. Can't you make up your mind to see what he wants?"

"Go ahead. But give me my gun and watch out," muttered Denison.

In the light of the moon, McCrossen, propped up by Fryin' Pan, reclined against the trunk of a half-grown tree. His eyes were closed.

"Here's Bill, Dave," Scott spoke low and gently. "You said you wanted to speak to him."

"Yes, Dave?" said Denison, haltingly.

"I'm done, Bill."

"Dave," exclaimed Denison, "I'm sorry it had to end this way."

"I talked pretty rough tonight," said McCrossen, brokenly, spitting the blood out of his throat.

"That's all right, Dave."

"Didn't really mean it all. You've always shot square, Bill. If some folks I've trained with had done that way, I mightn't be here tonight. Bill, a favor—"

"Go on, Dave."

"I've got an old-maid sister back East. She's all I've got. I'd hate her to know this come, rustlin', Bill."

"It'll never be said, Dave."

"Let it be a straight-out fight, Bill—you know."

"I know, Dave; I know. What's her address?"

"In my trunk, Bill," murmured McCrossen thickly. "Promise?"

"I promise."

"Give me—your hand."

Pardaloe was the first to reach Gunlock on the way home shortly before daylight. He rode in on his way to town to get hold of Dr. Carpy for Denison, whose condition worried him.

"I Know, Dave; I Know. What's Her Address?"

Fortunately the surgeon was already at Gunlock, whither he had been summoned to care for Sawdy.

With Sawdy's flesh wound already banded, Carpy sat in the living room, drinking a pot of coffee supplied by Jane.

He was enjoying in leisurely fashion his third or fourth cup of steaming stimulant when the sound of hoofs was heard. In a moment a resounding rap came at the door.

Jane started. In terrified appeal, she looked at the doctor. Carpy responded by calmly wiping his lips.

"Who's there?" he demanded curtly.

"Bill Pardaloe!" came the response. Carpy flung the door open.

Jane ran out of the bedroom. "Oh, Mr. Pardaloe!" she cried. "Where is Bill? Where is he?"

"He's on his way back to the hospital."

"Is he hurt? Is he wounded? Tell me!" cried the frantic girl.

"Why, no, yes—that is, he was aimin' to get back to the hospital before Doc found out he was gone," parried the veteran awkwardly.

Carpy intervened sternly: "Where is he now? Talk, Bill!"

"Ain't I talkin'? He's on the way here with Bob Scott."

"Then he's not hurt?" cried Jane.

"Why, no, yes—a little, maybe," stammered Pardaloe.

"Where you from?" demanded Carpy, still stern.

"Deep Creek."

"Was there a fight?"

"There was a little brush, Doc."

"Was Denison wounded?"

"Why—I guess he was pinked, Doc, yes."

"Where was he hit?" demanded Carpy.

"In the forearm, Doc. We got a tourniquet on that—he got another in the stomach."

Carpy felt the force of the disclosure. "Is he bleeding at the mouth?" he thundered.

"Why, no, Doc. But he claims he's all in."

"We'll bring him out, if that's all. Who was in the fight? Talk fast!"

"Dave McCrossen and Barney—with Bill."

"Where are McCrossen and Rebstock?"

"Right where they were when John Fryin' Pan left me. He was on his way to the Reservation to hunt up a couple of bucks to bury 'em and bring in the cattle," said Pardaloe in matter-of-fact fashion.

"Sit down here, Bill. Jane," directed the doctor, "get the boy a pot of coffee."

"And boil plenty of clean water on the stove."

"Yes, doctor. Bill is going to stop here on the way in, isn't he, Mr. Pardaloe?" asked Jane, tremulously.

Pardaloe nodded. "Ought to show up after while. They're ridin' kind of slow."

Jane ran to the kitchen. She roused Quong to heat the water and came back with supplies.

"No," continued Pardaloe, deep in a saucer of hot coffee, "I didn't see it. I was over on the west side of the creek—it's had crossin' there. I don't know how Bill came up. They never could get him across down there. We cut over the reservation and plugged for Gunlock—" He pricked up his ears and interrupted himself. "Shucks! That sounds like somebody now!"

Jane listened eagerly. "I can't hear anyone," she said.

"You will in a minute. There they are again."

Jane ran for the door. "Hold on a minute, Missy," exclaimed Pardaloe. "Let's make sure who it is."

He opened the door himself, stepped quickly outside, and shut it behind him. Within a very few minutes, ages to Jane, she heard the stamping of horses. Pardaloe flung the door open and called for Carpy. Jane hurried out with him.

Drooping low, Denison, iron-willed, had stuck to the end of the gruelling ride. Scott told how they had followed up the east bank of the creek—he himself on Rebstock's horse; how by great good fortune they had found a flask of whisky in Rebstock's saddle-bag, and that this had helped revive the wounded man when they halted to "spell" him; and how they had crossed Deep Creek at a reservation ford not far below Gunlock ranch.

Carpy and Pardaloe lifted Denison down from the horse. Jane supported his head and stooped to caress him and murmur low words. They laid him on her bed.

While Carpy tore open Denison's clothing and made a hasty examination, buckets of hot water were brought in.

The surgeon, with wearied back, presently straightened up. "Jane," he said solemnly, "you're a lucky girl. The bullet that meant death for your boy struck his belt buckle and tore around his side. Look here. This was all I was afraid of, this stomach wound. I didn't think so much about Bill, here. But, Jane, I didn't want you fixing for a funeral when you ought to be fixing for a wedding! We'll get him back to the hospital in a few days."

"Oh, no, Doctor," exclaimed Jane unsteadily, but with cold decision.

"Why, what do you mean, girl?"

"I mean he's at Gunlock to stay. He's never going to leave it!"

How to Check "Chimney Loss," Greatest Waste in Home Heating

WHAT is "chimney loss"? Well, that's a term we heating experts have for heat that goes up the chimney and is wasted.

Yet it's really a simple matter to save money by reducing this loss—convert "chimney loss" to "useful heat," as we call it. Here's the remedy:

Next time you refuel the fire, move the handle of the turn dam-

Sectional View Side View
Turn Damper in Smoke Pipe

per (that disc or plate-like damper inside the smoke pipe) 1-16th of an inch toward the closed upright position. Then, if the fire keeps on burning too freely, turn the damper another sixteenth of an inch. Repeat this operation until you find the correct adjustment—one that will deliver the greatest amount of useful heat with the least "chimney loss."

Once you have found this ideal adjustment of the damper, mark the position on the smoke pipe with a piece of chalk or something that can be plainly seen, and leave the damper set at that mark.

Bear this in mind: The nearer the turn damper is set to the closed position the smaller the "chimney loss" and the greater the volume of "useful heat" that goes to properly heating your home. And, of course, the lower your fuel bills.

Mistakes From Pride

I HAVE been more and more convinced, the more I think of it, that, in general, pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes. All the other passions do occasional good; but whenever pride puts in its word, everything goes wrong; and what it might really be desirable to do, quietly and innocently, it is mortally dangerous to do proudly.—Ruskin.

LEAH MERWIN had been the one elected to stay at home when the others went into town in the old flivver to the morning New Year's service at the church. Someone had to remain at home to watch the stock and, too, Leah hadn't a new or even a decent coat. Jake Merwin was having tough sledding in financial affairs without one more need being voiced, so Leah never told him of her need.

This weather," but Leah's words stopped at once as she made out in the swirling snow a car that was stopping in the barnyard. The plump figures of a man and a woman were making a wild dash for the protection of the house.

"We saw we couldn't go another turn of the wheels," the sweet, friendly woman told Leah—the lady who introduced the two of them as Mr. and Mrs. Tom Madison, 11 miles to the east of Berger. "We hoped to spend New Year's and visit at our son's, Tom Junior's over at Berger, but now—well, we want to buy our dinner here from you. May we, my dear, without putting you out?"

They were such a jolly pair and Leah even forgot to be embarrassed when she had to serve them the only thing she had prepared, a feast of delicious fried mush and butter and syrup and plenty of fresh milk and coffee. Supper consisted of the same fare and so did breakfast the next morning, but by that time the Merwins were able to break the drifts and reach the farm and the Madisons, via those breaks, went on their belated way.

"It will be a happy New Year every day for a year for us, Mommy," Leah shouted when the Madisons were out of sight. To a smiling but perplexed family, Leah explained that Mr. Madison owned a small chain of meat markets and small cross road grocery stores and that he had given her sufficient orders for slabs of cornmeal mush just like she had served him and his good wife, for all those stores for one year at least. "The labels on this mush, he said, are to read 'Lady Leah's Prize Mush.'" When the trio had quieted down a bit she added: "The money end of the contract will settle all our financial difficulties for the year and who knows, maybe forever!"

Beginning of the Year

As early as 251 B.C., the Romans accepted January as the beginning of the year. They named the month in honor of Janus, the two-faced god, as looking both into the past and the future. During the Middle Ages the year was made to begin at various dates. In England, in 1751, January was made the first month by act of Parliament.

Travelogue
For Life

By MARTHA B. THOMAS

"I'VE just had a thought," said Marcia, "and it's a grand one."

They were tucked cozily beneath a bear rug in an old-fashioned sleigh, gliding along under the stars to the silvery jangle of bells.

"Tell me at once," commanded Jerry, "I collect grand thoughts as a hobby."

Marcia laughed. "Tonight is New Year's eve, and if," she sat up straighter in her eagerness, "the sun were shining, and we were going with it, just as fast, I mean—we could yell down Happy New Year to the whole world as we rolled along!"

Jerry was amused and indulgent. "Don't you see," continued the girl, "we're all so used to thinking of events happening just where we are, and not following them on and on . . . The idea rather gets you."

"Around the world in 24 hours at New Year's. A zippy travelogue?"

But she was serious. "See here, Jerry, you and I are going to be married soon, and I sort of hope we can, off the ground."

"What an odd idea. Usually coming brides are chattering of linen and silver."

She pressed her hand on his arm. "Stop the horse a minute, please. There—let's both lean back and look up at the sky, and fill our eyes with stars, and space . . . and time-going-on. Maybe, if we drink deep enough," her voice was husky with feeling, "we won't get all tangled up with trifles. I'm a little afraid sometimes, of our days ahead, Jerry."

"Afraid?" The man's voice sounded hurt.

"Only that I'll get a habit of low-visibility."

"You mean," Jerry leaned over to take her hands "you want always to remember that new happiness, new ways of thought, and New Years, go ringing around the world with the sun; that time does not circle around one small set of people or circumstances?"

"Yes, yes, Jerry! Let's make a pact together, now. Not to think little thoughts about little events that happen to our little selves."

"Fine. I'm with you!"

"And to remind each another now and then, to stop, and get the true sense of time and space and world-bigness going on and on."

"Done, darling! New Year's resolution for a happy life: KEEP THE SUN, MOON AND STARS IN YOUR THOUGHTS . . . and you'll never be narrow-minded!"

Jerry kissed her.

"Hear the bells ringing in town? Aren't they far and sweet?" whispered Marcia. "Midnight circling the world. New Year's in a minute!"

NEW YEAR'S BELLS

FROM the earliest times the ringing of bells has been employed as a method of announcing death, and the use of bells at New Year's eve symbolizes the death of the old year. In England it was formerly customary to ring muffled bells just before twelve, and at twelve to remove the wrappings and to allow the bells to ring loudly.

Uncle Phil Says:

Tomorrow Disappoints

Tomorrow always promises well, but remember there is reasonably certain to be one disappointment.

One loves even a precocious little boy with his front teeth out. He's meeker for the time being.

Some men have great patience, but Henry D. Thoreau put it another way by saying they lived a life of quiet desperation.

Bills that you run fall due and fall due and fall due; but if you pay as you go, you forget all about your expenditures.

Neither great poverty nor great riches will hear reason.

Dangerous Meddling

Never meddle with a hornet or a man who is minding his own business.

A placid blue lake may arouse your emotions, but it takes a storm to stir its surface and your feelings.

We have to go along from day to day, even when we know we are frequently treading on toes. Some become indifferent.

Women trust to their intuition. So do men, but they won't admit it.

A man says "I am the captain of my soul" and wonders what to do next.

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

No matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month.

Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tune up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Driving Hints

(Prepared by the Safety & Traffic Engineering Department of the Chicago Motor Club.)

Have you ever been stalled somewhere, far from a service station, with a starter which refused to work? To those who haven't had the experience here's advice from the Chicago Motor Club on how to get out of the situation.

Nine times out of ten the reason for the starter's failure to function is because the pinion gear on the starting motor fails to free itself from the gear on the flywheel. With this gear out of normal position the starting motor does not receive the current and, consequently, will not turn over.

The first move to make is to put the car in high gear, first making certain that the ignition is turned off. Then get out of the car and rock it back and forth by pushing from the rear or pulling from the front. Generally this action, which causes the flywheel to turn slightly, will free the starter gear.

WEAK KIDNEYS

Are you suffering with backaches, headaches, dizziness, nervousness, indigestion, "getting up" at night? These are Nature's warnings that your kidneys are not functioning—not cleaning your blood of poisons as they should. WARNER'S COMPOUND helps weak kidneys and irritated bladder. The old reliable for 62 years. All druggists. WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

HOW OFTEN

CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

NEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month. You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. IN MEMORIUM

MUNCH, HENRY G.

In loving remembrance of our dear husband and daddy who passed away one year ago today, Dec. 30, 1935. He bid no one a last farewell. He said good-bye to none. His loving heart had ceased to beat before we knew it, he was gone. He did not fail to do his best. His heart was true and tender. He worked hard for those he left. And ever will be remembered. Loving wife and children.

IN MEMORIUM

ENDERS

In fond and loving memory of our dear wife and mother Lydia Enders, who left us so suddenly seven years ago. Dec. 30, 1929.

Remembrance is a golden chain. Death tries to break, but all in vain. To have, to love and then to part is the greatest sorrow of one's heart. The years may wipe out many things. But this they wipe out never—The memory of those happy days When we were all together. Tho' our hearts may break with sorrow, By the grief so hard to bear, We shall meet her some glad morning, In the upper garden, there. Signed, loving husband and children, FRED ENDERS.

Orland PTA Xmas Party and School Play Huge Success

CHRISTMAS PARTY ENJOYED BY PUPILS AND PARENTS

The play, "A Christmas Carol" presented by the Orland Park High School last Tuesday evening at the PTA Children's Christmas Party was enjoyed by everyone. The play was directed by Miss Evelyn Priest.

The parts in the play were well taken by all the pupils. Sherman Knox, the leading character, had an especially difficult role, but he proved himself very capable in acting it.

There were a number of different scenes, among them being the office of Fezziwig and Company, the Fezziwig Ball, during which the upper grade room put on the Virginia reel, the humble Cratchet kitchen, and the churchyard scene. The main stage was used for these various scenes, while a stage built out in front represented the office of Ebenezer Scrooge. Don Uthe and Richard Miller made a real contribution in their help in staging the play.

The carols sung by the pupils of the upper grade room, the visits of the Spirits of Christmas Past, Present and Yet to Be upon Scrooge in his candle-lit office and the merry Christmas celebrations of the Fezziwigs and the Cratchets all made the holiday atmosphere of the play most effective.

Providing Our Food Supply

(The following General Science Report by Billy Elkin on Unit IV is one of the best turned in and we believe is deserving of the recognition of appearing on this page.)

Before man knew how to domesticate his own plants and animals, he had to eat what plant foods he could find just around him, and he had to kill wild animals that chanced to come near him, that were not stronger or more fierce than himself because of his crude weapons.

In modern times we have our own food on hand to a great extent. We have the ability, providing we have the money, to purchase a greater variety of foods than primitive man ever could have imagined. Because of this variety we are able to eat the proper kind of foods to fit our various occupations.

We eat food to feed our cells so that they may produce energy for us. We need energy to supply heat to keep our bodies at the body temperatures in cold weather, for much heat is given off of the body in cold weather, and the cells need to produce heat to keep the body at 98.6°F. the body temperature for a healthy person. Energy is necessary to move the muscles of the body to make them able to expand and contract, thus we can walk, talk and otherwise exercise which without energy, would be impossible to do and life could not exist.

The body gets energy from the food we eat through the process of slow oxidation. The food we eat gets into the blood stream and is transported through the body. As the blood passes through the body parts of the food material is supplied to the parts of the body that need them. The food which is taken from the blood combines with the oxygen carried in the blood stream from the lungs. This process of oxidation is similar to the process of the burning wood by fire, but is so slow that no flame is present. It is the energy produced by this slow process that warms us on cold days and enables us to move more than five hundred muscles of our body.

Some of the cells of the body are constantly being destroyed and the food materials in others is used up. It then becomes necessary for the body to produce new cells to take the place of the broken down cells. The only source of these materials is the food we eat. The living protoplasm in the cells can take these lifeless materials and change them into new protoplasm. Thus new cells are produced.

The body grows in a similar manner. The protoplasm in the cells makes new protoplasm, in this way it increases its size and begins to divide and it forms two smaller cells otherwise exactly like the former one except for size.

All of man's food comes either directly or indirectly from plants. He either eats the plant or plant parts himself, eats animals that have eaten of the plants or eats animals that have killed and eaten herbivorous animals or plant eating animals. The plants grow and manufacture our foods. They take the raw materials, (much like the factories of man do) like soil water, minerals, carbon dioxide and nitrate and carry it to the leaves where it is manufactured into sugar, starch, proteins and fat through the process of photosynthesis. In this process the soil, water and minerals are carried up the stem of the plant after coming through the root hairs thru the process of osmosis and added with carbon dioxide the manufactured materials are either used for food immediately or stored for future use.

Foods are classified in order that one may correctly improve one's diet. The basis for classification is the chemical composition of the food or the kinds and properties of the elements of which they are composed. Carbohydrates are composed of three elements, carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen and include starch and sugar. Fats are composed of the same elements but in different proportions. They include butter, cream and meat fats. The two above types of foods are fuel foods or foods used to produce heat energy. Protein contain all of the necessary elements for the building of protoplasm. They are oxygen, carbon, hydrogen, calcium, nitrogen and some other elements. Minerals, vitamins and water are some other necessary types of foods. Science is able to find out what elements and what classes of foods are present and to what extent; but that would be of little or no value if it was not known what kinds of foods are necessary for one of every age, sex and occupation. The fuel value or the energy value of foods like that just mentioned is measured in calories the unit of measure of the fuel value of foods.

Boys and girls of different ages need different amounts or numbers of calories as well as men and women of different types of occupations. People who are overweight should cut down on the number of their daily calories, especially on sugars, starches and fats while underweight people should increase them. Foods spoil because of the action of molds, bacteria and yeasts. Decomposition is the process by which

BASKETBALL

A high school basketball team has been organized and much enthusiasm has been demonstrated. The principal has written to a number of high schools for games and we are anxiously awaiting the replies.

We have already heard from the Blue Island High School and have tentative games scheduled for Friday night, January 22nd at Tinley Park gym and a return game at Blue Island Feb. 5th. The members of the squad are: Robert Miller, Don Uthe, William McAllen, Don Brennan, Ray Glahn, Bill Davidson.

We have been fortunate in securing Royal Glahn to coach the team and he expects to round out the boys into an effective and aggressive basketball combination.

On Friday, December 18 our team met the Frankfort team in a double header capturing both games to the tune of 30 to 17 and 12 to 6. Don Uthe, Ray Glahn and Bill McAllen lead the attack for Orland.

Orland Graduates Continue High School Studies

A recent check of last year's graduates reveals the interesting fact that all but one are continuing their high school education.

Those attending the Blue Island high school are: Donald Cleveland, Marvin Schmadeke, William Grosskopf, Charlyn Knox, Harold Kay, Margaret Cooper, Lucille Reish.

Those attending Parker high are: Floyd Cooper, Lucille Cooper, Ruth Robson and Clarence Creer.

Attending Joliet High are: Mary Ellen Heatherwick and Hazel Smith.

foods spoil for the cells really break up and form new materials. When decomposition takes place foods have a bad taste and odor and some times become poisonous. Molds and bacteria are plants that form on foods and cause them to spoil. Molds are cotton-like structures formed on many foods exposed to the air. Spore cups containing tiny spores or seeds found in the air after the spore cups break are part of the mold. The spores or molds and bacteria form new plants whenever they land on favorable conditions, such as warm, moist bread, although they are so small they can be carried by the air and are invisible. Yeasts cause the sugar in sweet foods to turn to alcohol and the alcohol to turn to acetic acid or vinegar. This is called fermentation and can be avoided by preventing unnecessary exposure of molasses, syrup, etc., to the air. Unclean hands and utensils besides insects may carry diseases and agents of decomposition to our foods.

To prevent the actions of spoiling on foods they should be correctly handled, kept at correct temperatures and with the proper amount of moisture. Pasteurization is also important to prevent milk from spoiling. The milk is heated to a temperature of 144°F for thirty minutes and then cooled and kept unexposed to the open air. In this process many of the germs in the milk are destroyed without spoiling the flavor of it or its value. Another important factor in preventing foods from spoiling is cooking and canning while a third is by the addition of certain chemicals to destroy bacteria. Two more agents in prevention of spoiling are drying and cooling (sometimes frying). Prevention of unnecessary spoiling of foods, saves millions of dollars worth of foods.

Question: Are you in favor of eliminating home work for all high school pupils?

Billy Elkin: "I do not think that the teachers of some schools really need to give the pupils so much homework as they sometimes do. I am not opposed to a moderate amount of homework occasionally, but it is unnecessary to give the pupils homework that will take hours to do. It is necessary for some pupils to do several problems on every new type of work before they can fully understand it and it is for their benefit that they are given homework. As it is impossible in most high schools for the instructors to single out these pupils and give them homework, because of the great number of pupils in each class and the number each teacher has to instruct, many pupils would protest because of the seeming unfairness of giving some pupils homework and not to others. Therefore I believe it is quite fair for teachers to give a limited amount of homework as it is their only method of telling if the pupil is getting his work without examination.

A teacher will explain a subject thoroughly and the pupils might not understand it until they are compelled to do homework where they can think for themselves.

Robert Miller: I'm in favor of not having homework for the high school pupils because we have no time to go ice skating, play basketball and other sports. Besides we all study very much in school.

Donald Uthe: I think we should not have homework unless we are behind. My reason for not having homework every night is, we don't have any time for ourselves.

Betty Parks: To those who are slower in their school work, eliminating homework would probably mean failure or extra work during study period. Pupils who do not need homework, should not be forced to do it. I think homework should be left to the judgement of the teachers who can best decide which pupils needs homework.

Norman Yunker: Yes I am in favor of eliminating homework because most pupils have work to do at home before and after school. Sometimes we go visiting or we have company. I think we have enough school work at school without having to do some at home.

Mary E. VanCamp: I favor homework during the high school years, for as the courses are so arranged, it is necessary to give more time than is permitted in school. I think there is much to be gained by quiet home study.

Sherman Knox: Probably many pity the poor high school pupil because required to do so much home work. Those of you who do not, would soon change your mind if you saw the strenuous mental work carried on in the classroom and later in the evening at home. The attitude of the pupil toward his homework is expressed in: "Homework, homework everywhere, And all our hearts did sink. Homework, homework every where, Nor could any of us think." The student cannot keep his mind on the work when he is at home, studying because he has already completed all that he should in the hours allotted to him at school. If he has to do any excessive amount of this so-called homework, he may in time get so he even hates the mentioning of the word school. This should never be, for when he regards his work in this manner, you can never expect him to attain the heights that you have always hoped he sometime would reach for he will go thru life disliking anything in connection with the thought.

GRADE SCHOOL CAROLERS ADD FESTIVE TOUCH TO YULE FESTIVITIES

The pupils of the Upper Grade Room, accompanied by Miss Van Camp, sang carols from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m. Tuesday evening. They sang near the homes of sick and shut-ins, and the grandparents who live in town of the pupils in the room. When they returned they sang carols for "The Christmas Carol" given by the High School.

QUESTION: "What is it that makes Christmas a perfect day in your home?"

Shirley Cleveland, age 9: It would be a perfect day if I got everything I've asked for. Then I want a tree, to send cards, and to have grandma and grandpa for dinner at our house. I wish it would snow very very hard. A merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Robert Doyle, age 9: I want to go to church, have a nice dinner and give presents to my parents and brothers and sisters. I hope my aunt can come to our house Christmas day.

Gordon Powell: I would like to have a tool set or an Erector Set No. 8 and Christmas at grandfather's house.

Franklin Uthe, age 10: One nice thing is snow and ice. Then too, I hope we have company for dinner, so we can have some fun.

Bobby Estand, age 10: Eating is the best thing on Christmas.

Joyce Homering, age 10: Christmas will be perfect if we have a lot of snow and it is cold. I would like my grandmother and grandfather to come to our house for Christmas, then I would be very happy.

school to do the work which they take home. For there is always a few things your parents want you to do after school and then also the students would like a little more time for pleasure. A little homework is all right if occasionally you fall behind the class, but outside of that reason I do not see why we have to have so much homework. I am hoping it will be eliminated before long.

Xmas Poetry

Ring bells and chiming bells,
Along with Santa's pack!
Mama, daddy all of us,
Tell about old Santa's sack.
We tell the oldest story
Around the Christmas tree
Christmas joys and Christmas toys
Is everything we see!
—Marion Peters

We get up on Christmas morn
To see what each has got,
Because we know old Santa Claus
Our joys has not forgot.
Carol got a dolly,
With big and pretty eyes;
And Lucille for her gift
Has a big surprise;
And Santa gave to Lylas dear
A new and pretty sled.
I have a pretty doll
That sleeps in a little bed.
—Eleanor Cooper

There's not a stir, not even a mouse,
Cause Santa Claus is on top of the house,
When all the children are asleep,
Down the chimney Santa will creep.
—Mildred Doctor

Santa Claus is coming to town,
He steps around without a sound.
In his pack he has a flute,
For the boy who likes to toot.
—Eleanor Knox

Again Christmas time is here,
To make us all happy and full of cheer,
Glad songs the carolers sing,
Happiness to us bring.
—Muriel Morlock

Old Santa Claus is coming,
I met him on the road,
He's driving eight swift reindeer
And he's brought a mighty load
Of candy, nuts and toys
For all good girls and boys.
—Dorothy Arnold

Down the chimney on Christmas Eve,
Lots of things he will leave,
In whiskers white, and face so bright,
With reindeer, Oh! what a beautiful sight.
Oh! It's Santa Claus,
Hear on the roof the reindeer pause.
—Jean Doyle

Lovely is the Christmas tree,
With its shining lights to see,
And the ornaments so pretty
With its tinsel is so glittery.
—Mildred Doctor

Who is coming down the chimney tonight
With a red coat and a beard so white?
Who is carrying a pack on his back
As he comes down the chimney which is so black?
It's old Mr. Claus! I knew you'd guess,
For whatever you ask, he always says yes.

A New Year—
A New Congress

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

America at this time greets a New Year—and a new Congress.

What do the American people ask of each?

Of the New Year, opportunity for longer strides along the road to recovery . . .

Of the new Congress, whatever action, or restraint, may be necessary to make such strides possible . . .

America is ready for those lengthened strides. The need exists for new buildings, new goods, replacements; for many things that supply and serve the people. Industry and commerce—all our creative facilities—stand ready to meet that need. Workers in every field are eager for the employment that increased production assures. Talk of closer cooperation among all elements essential to a quickened program fills the newspapers.

All that seems necessary is Confidence.

Confidence that public, rather than factional, advantages will sway the men chosen to represent us in our National Legislature.

Confidence that no new barriers will be placed in the way of work and production.

Confidence that constructive plans for the future will not have to be scrapped overnight to meet the vagaries of every glittering economic novelty.

Confidence that the worker's income will not be wasted by political extravagance billed against his present and future earnings.

Confidence that throughout the nation humanitarian considerations will dominate political aspects in emergency measures to aid the unfortunate.

The Seventy-fifth Congress faces a glorious opportunity to inspire this confidence.

If it grasps the opportunity, it can earn the gratitude of a great and encouraged people.

If it fails . . . our wishes for a Prosperous New Year will have been in vain.

BY COMMUNISM

Communism within the United States is a growing menace which cannot be dismissed lightly.

The V. F. W. 1936-1937 program of objectives, stresses the protection and promotion of Americanism, with vigorous opposition to subversive forces, and with more restrictive alien legislation. We support this statement by quotations from a recent analysis of communism in the United States, received from National V. F. W. headquarters, Kansas City, Mo.

"Between the eighth and the ninth conventions of the Communist party, the communist membership registered an increase of 70 per cent.

This increase was made during the two years immediately following recognition of Russia by the United States, at which time Russia pledged itself to discontinue its Third Internationale's organization and agitation activities within the United States. Our statistics show that 52.2 per cent of the registered communists in this country are foreign born but a recent membership campaign, conducted by the Communist party, resulted in an increase which was 66.3 per cent American born and only 33.7 per cent foreign born.

"That American citizens, born in this country to the advantages and privileges of this democracy, are enlisting under the red flag of communism is an appalling commentary on conditions today. There is no sphere of American life into which the treacherous propaganda of communism is not penetrating. Their own figures claim 1,000,000 of our youth. Moreover, they declare that 6,525 well trained red agents have been graduated from communist party schools of revolutionary tactics and agitation, 3,000 from section schools, and 700 from district training schools. They claim to have doubled their membership in unions in a recent 4-months period, and to have increased their membership in the American Federation of Labor by 36 per cent."

Patriotic citizens and organizations must immediately rally to the support of the American form of government and the American Constitution.

Continued apathy of such forces concerning the rapidly growing ranks of communism will inevitably result in the downfall of the government and its replacement by a soviet or bolshevik system similar to Russia's.

Someone wants to ask L. R. if he really does know who M. M. is?

It's rumored around that Diamond Lil and the Irishman broke up, but we can't believe that. They had Christmas dinner together and we'll bet they have New Year's together also.

That good looking fellow from Lincoln Estates must have enjoyed playing those gals favorite songs at the Christmas party Monday night. Bette's "Tormented", Diamond Lil's "Me and the Moon" D. W.'s "After Im Gone" and "The Way You Look Tonight."

Imagine someone's disappointment when not one of the pictures taken Christmas day turned out good. Imagine too, the greater disappointment in not being home when Johnny and Bill brought them out Monday night.

Johnny wishes everyday were Christmas if there were mistletoe around and neighbors gazing out the windows; and D. W. wishes everyday were Christmas day if Johnny was around.

Diamond Lil claims boy friends were plentiful Saturday night. She had five all at once.

M. M. had a birthday, the day before Christmas and you should see the beautiful gifts she got—especially one—just what she wanted. She seems to enjoy it immensely.

L. R. was so terribly disappointed 'cause her boy friend had to work Christmas day.

Someone tells us that Santa was good to D. M. only not as good as was expected.

B. W. and M. M. are looking forward to their New Year's Eve dates. "Pickles" and "Wild Bill."

D. M. ought to feel great, cause his new gal really goes for him in a big way. Such a way that she casts aside all other dates for him.

The Schnitzelbank appears to be quite a hangout now for the younger set, after one o'clock closing hours in Joliet.

Ignorance and Disease Partners

To the Editor:

Ignorance and Disease go hand in hand.

During the past year, through your publication of educational facts regarding tuberculosis, you have played a vital part in the international campaign seeking the eradication of this disease.

In thirty years, the tuberculosis death rate has been reduced two-thirds. Public knowledge regarding the disease has spread. Much of this progress has been achieved through the willingness of Illinois newspaper editors to give generously of their space to advise the public about scientific information relating to early discovery and treatment.

The fact that tuberculosis still claims more than 4,000 lives in Illinois each year proves that the end of our work has not yet been reached.

For the assistance you have given us in the past, our sincerest thanks. We hope we may continue to count on you for support.

We wish you and the members of your staff a healthy and happy 1937. Robinson Bosworth, M. D. Pres., ILLINOIS TUBERCULOSIS ASSO.

Bedtime Story for Children

BILLY MINK HUNTS IN VAIN

IN VAIN Billy Mink searched for rats in the big barn. The smell of them was everywhere, but the rats themselves had disappeared completely. Time after time, following a trail, Billy was led to the opening out of doors under the barn. It was clear that all the rats had left the big barn and that all had gone out the same way.

"They've moved off somewhere," thought Billy. "I frightened them so that they didn't dare stay here any longer. All have gone, young, old, big, little, and middle-sized. There is no fun left for me here in the big barn. I think I'll follow them. Where they can go, I can go. They are a gang of robbers. They are ugly, dirty, and of no account whatever. In fact, they're worse than that. They have so many babies at a time and have them so often that there is danger that they will drive their honest neighbors off the earth. Yes, I think I'll follow them."

Billy cautiously poked his head through the opening that led out of doors. Then he blinked with surprise. Outside everything was spotlessly white. It was snowing. It had been snowing for some time. Not a footprint of a single rat was to be seen. Moreover, there was no scent for Billy to follow by means of his wonderful nose. The snow had covered their trail. Billy could only lick his lips and wonder in which direction those rats had gone.

"If I knew more about this part of the country I would know better where to look for those rats," muttered Billy. "As it is, I haven't been here long enough to know about anything but this barn, the henhouse, and the big woodpile between the two. I wonder if they can have moved over to that woodpile or to the henhouse. The woodpile would give them hiding places, but they wouldn't find anything to eat there.

"If they have gone to the henhouse they can hide underneath it, and for food they can steal eggs and kill a hen. I've known rats to do just those things. I've known them to kill chickens and then have the owner of the chickens blame me or Jimmy Skunk for it. I hate rats. Everybody else does. I know most everybody and I don't know a single person who has a good word to say for Robber the Rat and his gang. I think I'll run over to the henhouse to see if they are there."

So Billy Mink went first to the

COLORFUL DISHES

FLOWER bowls, candle sticks, compotes and sherbet glasses as well as the ordinary service dishes are full of color these days. When the snow covers the ground and the bleak winds blow, the cheery fireplace and the colorful glasses add much to the coziness of entertaining. Linen and flowers carry out the color scheme. Fruits are always a note of color in a dining room. A bowl of Chinese china, filled with oranges, pears, apples, of various hues such as red, yellow and green; the banana with its bright yellow, with the purple of grapes and the brown of nuts, makes a centerpiece for the table which is hard to equal.

Small cakes may be frosted with a white icing and coconut colored with any desired color, using paste or liquid fruit coloring, blending until the right shade is obtained. Sprinkle this over the cakes while moist with most charming result. Cut cakes with a small biscuit cutter in cylindrical shapes, dip into moist frosting and roll well in tinted coconut, making another attractive shape.

Angel food may be mixed as usual and divided into two or three parts, making as many shades of color with a bit of coloring. Put together in layers, adding a fourth of a cupful of cocoa to the layer to be used at the bottom, then add the other colors as desired. The cake may be baked in a loaf as marble cake if one has less time for preparation.

For a daffodil cake have one layer yellow, using a sponge cake with the yolk of eggs and one of angel-food mixture. Put together with lemon or orange filling, ice and sprinkle with coconut.

DO THE LINES IN OUR FACES REVEAL THE EMOTIONS THAT DOMINATE US?

OUR emotions are registered quite accurately on our faces. Actors practice certain facial expressions in order to portray certain characteristics, and paint lines on their faces to suggest the emotions desired. The same sets of muscles are used in expressing both happiness and sorrow, hate or joy—but they are used in a different way.

The Trail of Truth

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

Mankind moves onward day by day, But some men grow impatient. They Are like the lad who runs ahead And scorns the path his elders tread, Deserts the trail the woods to try, Though there's a road to travel by.

Yet he shall presently return, Young error yet old truth shall learn.

The marks of other men remain, Their cairns erected on the plain. Here high the shafts of honor lift. Erected on the rock of thrift.

Impatient hands would change the earth, When it is men who must have worth;

And you may pass a thousand laws, Yea, even in a righteous cause, Yet statutes will not make a state While men still covet, men still hate.

We need not change the law, we need

Not alter anything, indeed, Except men's hearts—and even they Need not the dawn of some new day,

Need not new trails that men may miss,

But men who better follow this.

THE first, or nail joint of the thumb denotes the manner in which the will is used. It shows unmistakably whether its possessor is stubborn or easily influenced, impulsive or cautious. The formation of the first, or nail, joint, holds a wealth of information concerning the variations of the will.

The Strong and Stubborn Will.

The nail joint which indicates this temperamental trait also denotes a man or woman who cannot be budged once the mind has been made up to follow a given course of action. It is most notable in the rigidity of the joint when pressure is exerted to bend it backward toward the wrist, while any unexpected attempt to close the joint palmward meets with involuntary resistance.

The nail joint of the stubborn thumb is usually of moderate length and inclined to be thickest. There is a marked absence of taper at the sides. If the joint appears to be extremely short, the will of its owner is often blindly unreasonable, acting upon conclusions which, even though faulty, are next to impossible to change. If with this combination the underside opposite the nail is bulging, or "clubbed," we have sure indication of self-will that may get its possessor into difficulties through failure to control a violent temper. If, however, the sides of an otherwise stubborn nail joint are cleanly tapered, with the underside portion gracefully shaped, the stubbornness indicated is more likely to be confined to decisions, calmer though difficult to alter in business matters.

WNU Service.

People who are usually cheerful, eventually develop lines in the face that suggest this, and as old age with all its wrinkles comes on them, they have still a pleasant face. People who are constant grouches, always worrying, and never happy develop lines that suggest these emotions. The face is the mirror of our characteristic emotional life.

Don't Irritate
Gas Bloating

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to old poisonous matter in the constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria.

If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable.

You can't eat or sleep. Your head aches. Your back aches. Your complexion is sallow and pimply. Your breath is foul. You are a sick, grouchy, wretched, unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

Thousands of sufferers have found in Adlerika the quick, scientific way to rid their systems of harmful bacteria. Adlerika rids you of gas and cleanses foul poisons out of BOTH upper and lower bowels. Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika. Get rid of GAS. Adlerika does not gripe—is not habit forming. At all Leading Druggists.

National Topics Interpreted

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLOC. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington—On the eve of the opening of a new congress, the seventy-fifth, there is great hullabaloo and clamor about social and economic legislation and particularly about the alleged necessity for constitutional amendments giving congress more power to deal with these problems. Much of the noise emanates from minorities, highly organized pressure groups, and it is difficult, therefore, to tell exactly what the attitude of the country, as a whole, may be.

There are those both in congress and out who contend that the overwhelming vote for President Roosevelt's re-election constituted a mandate for immediate action on a number of these highly delicate and difficult questions. There are others whose contention is that the great vote given President Roosevelt was, in fact, a tribute to his personal popularity and that it was in no way connected with the various problems that are now before the country in individual capacity. Whatever the answer to these contending forces, the fact remains that we are due to hear something of them on the floors of the house and senate in the next few months.

One of the things about which we are hearing many, many words at the moment is a proposal for an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting child labor. It is the argument that such an amendment should be annexed to the Constitution and that it should give congress additional authority to enact legislation setting forth the details of this new type of prohibition.

Yet, while all of this raving and raging is going on, how many people are there who are aware of the fact that a constitutional amendment doing this very thing has been pending before the states for a little more than twelve years? How many people are there who recall that this amendment has been ratified by twenty-four states? Whatever their recollection is, it is a fact and it remains a fact that to all intents and purposes, enough states have refused to ratify the amendment to kill it off.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, being alive to what he considers the meaning of the recent huge vote for President Roosevelt, has attempted to revive the fight for ratification of that child labor amendment above mentioned. He has written to the heads of the various state and local labor groups urging them to work for favorable action on the amendment in the states that have heretofore rejected it.

This brings up a new legal question. Stated succinctly, the question is whether a state legislature that has once rejected a proposition to amend the Constitution can reverse itself and approve the resolution after having once killed it. Mr. Green contends that this is possible. The American Bar association takes a contrary view.

So, we are confronted with a problem within a problem and one that is likely to be distorted and twisted and misrepresented by those interests that have sought for a long time to make the Constitution appear outmoded. To become attached to the Constitution, an amendment must be ratified under the terms of the Constitution itself, by three-fourths of the states. That is thirty-six. Since twelve more states must ratify, there is likely to be a hard drive to gain some of the remaining states and to bring about reversal of positions already taken. It nearly always happens in "drives" that there is much loose mouthings and many unwarranted and unjustified statements. It probably will be so in this instance and the country must be on guard to sift the truth from the propaganda and must be prepared to make up its mind whether it desires to place in the Constitution a hard and fast rule that no child under eighteen years of age may be allowed to work gainfully.

For the sake of the record, here-with is the language of the proposed amendment that is now pending:

"The congress shall have power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age. The power of the several states is unimpaired by this article except that the operation of state laws shall be suspended to the extent necessary to give effect to legislation enacted by the congress."

From these words, it will be seen that an attempt is made to give congress greater power over the rights of states to legislate for themselves. Such a purport brings up in my mind the old question of whether a state or the federal government shall be supreme. There certainly are times, there are circumstances and there are conditions in which the federal government alone can deal with problems better than states can deal with them individually. But after all, conditions are not the same in any two states of the Union and it seems to me that the states ought to give careful thought to any proposition that takes away from them forever whatever rights are left to them under the Constitution. They ought to be free as far as they may be to handle their own problems on the basis of local requirements. And this is written, let me emphasize, not in opposition to any proposal that would abolish child labor.

The country cannot know definitely until President Roosevelt delivers his message to the new congress, dealing with the state of the Union, exactly what his position is going to be on the so-called social welfare problems of the country. This is a general category and involves such things as the so-called social security legislation and legislation giving the federal government greater control over private business. The two phases go hand in hand and as far as I have been able to discover, it will be impossible to deal with one without in some manner dealing with the other.

For example, the present social security statutes have a direct effect upon business through their taxation provisions. While basically they are designed to protect against the sufferings of unemployment and the destitution of the aged who are without resources, it can be readily seen that somebody must pay the bill. The Roosevelt administration's theory is that private employers, meaning business as a whole, shall be the logical source from which to draw the financial protection that is conceived to be necessary.

But in this theory there is involved very definitely the right of the federal government to enter into the fields that are now occupied or may be occupied by the states. It is largely a taxing proposition that the federal government must use if it is going to reach those classes able to pay. But the Constitution, federal laws and traditional practices of our people have built up certain lines of demarcation between federal and state rights. The question therefore becomes simply one that requires determination by the people whether they are going to allow the federal government to encroach further upon the fields that hitherto have been reserved for the states.

We hear much talk about a revival of NRA; a revival of it on a basis that will make it constitutional and one with provisions that will reach a greater percentage of business than was reached by the original NRA. Organized labor seems to be in favor of this proposition and naturally will exert considerable power in congress, but some lawyers among the representatives and senators tell me that they do not see how the purpose can be accomplished without a constitutional amendment.

On the basis of all of the information and opinion that I have been able to gather, my guess would be that before this session of congress is over something tangible in the way of a new constitutional amendment will be offered. It would seem, on the basis of the present trends, that it will be possible for the different schools of thought on this subject to get together only upon a constitutional resolution. My guess is, further, that it is utterly impossible for all of the groups and blocs to reach an understanding on legislation along these lines. Few of them are willing to compromise and without the attitude of compromise on highly controversial legislation, nothing except stalemates results. Some observers even now hold the belief that it will be impossible for any agreement to be reached within congress on any of these social welfare propositions simply because the range of views as to what is good for the country is so wide.

There are certain bits of evidence now to be seen that indicate a more determined position on the part of business itself. I think it could be said without equivocation that the business interests have been the target for political demagoguery in the last few years to a greater extent than ever in history. Of course, business has not come forth with clean hands. Yet, it is made to appear now that business has taken about all of the maltreatment to which it is entitled and it would seem, therefore, that the time has arrived for it to be given some consideration by the government which has supervision over it as well as us as individuals.

UNCOMMON AMERICANS

First War Correspondent

ON THE monument which they erected over his grave are inscribed these words: "He was a poet, journalist, author, and farmer—eminent in all." Yet this does less than justice to the career of George Wilkins Kendall.

A native of New Hampshire, Kendall became a printer at an early age and followed his trade in many cities. He was in New York in 1833 when an outbreak of the dreaded cholera caused him to take ship for New Orleans. There he entered the employ of a paper called the True American, and while working there conceived the idea of a new daily newspaper which should follow the policies that had made the New York Sun and Philadelphia Ledger so successful.

Taking into partnership Francis A. Lumsden, a fellow employee, Kendall launched the New Orleans Picayune in January, 1837. He was only twenty-eight at the time and his resources were small. But he was such an enterprising editor that the Picayune soon became one of the best known papers in the country.

At the outbreak of the War with Mexico in 1846, New Orleans became the chief outfitting point for the American forces. It was also the natural center of communication between the armies in the field and Washington. Kendall was quick to see the journalistic opportunity which this offered. He organized a system of relays of horses and riders between Mexico and New Orleans and of fast boats between New Orleans and Baltimore. Then he accompanied the armies of Scott and Taylor and began sending back vivid first-hand accounts of their battles, frequently writing his dispatches while cannon roared and bullets whistled around him.

Kendall supplied the government with its first knowledge of the battle of Buena Vista and it was again this enterprising journalist who informed Washington that the treaty of peace had been signed. He came out of the war with the title of major and a bullet in his knee, received at the storming of Chapultepec. In his later years he retired to a farm in Texas where he was a successful farmer and stock raiser and he died there in 1887.

Ambassador to His Native Land

HE WAS born a Yankee during the early days of the American republic. Forty years later, having helped establish a new American republic, he came back to his native land, the accredited minister to its government from the government of the younger nation of which he later became the last president. And that in brief is the paradoxical career of Anson Jones.

Born at Great Barrington, Mass., on January 20, 1798, young Jones decided to become a doctor. After several years study in Litchfield, Conn., he was licensed to practice in 1820. Then the wanderlust seized him and he wandered to Philadelphia, to New Orleans, to South America and finally settled in Texas in 1833.

At the outbreak of the troubles between Texas and Mexico he was among the first to advocate a declaration of Texan independence. When the war started he enlisted as a private but was soon appointed a surgeon in the Texas army of liberation. With it he served at San Jacinto and after the republic was founded he became representative from Brazoria to the Texan congress.

In 1838 he was appointed minister to the United States. Thus this Yankee came back to his homeland as an "ambassador" from a "foreign power." While in Washington, he was elected to the Texas senate and later became its president. During the second term of Sam Houston as president of the Lone Star republic, Jones was his secretary of state, and in 1844 he was elected president.

That was a critical year in the affairs of the new nation. There was talk of annexation by the United States and a sharp division of opinion arose among Texans over it. One of those who was opposed to it was the President. But the citizens of the republic voted overwhelmingly in favor of it and on December 29, 1845, the republic of Texas came to an end and the state of Texas succeeded it.

Bowing to the inevitable, Jones turned over the reins of government to James Pinckney Henderson, the first governor of the state of Texas, and retired to his home in Washington county. In 1857 he was prominently mentioned as a candidate for United States senator but he was destined never to return to Washington where he had once gone as "ambassador." In a fit of insanity he died by his own hand on January 8, 1858, convinced to the last that Texas had made a mistake in giving up its independence.

Lesson for January 3

THE SON OF GOD BECOMES MAN

LESSON TEXT—John 1:1-18. GOLDEN TEXT—And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us. John 1:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Home. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Boyhood of Jesus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God Coming to Us in Jesus. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Fact and Purpose of the Incarnation.

The opening of a new year always brings with it a sense of solemn responsibility for one's life and service, and at the same time a thrilling expectancy. No better way can be found to begin this year of our Lord, 1937, than in the study of God's Word, not only by ourselves, but in the fellowship of others in the church and Sunday school.

The series of lessons outlined for the year gives us the eagerly apprehended opportunity of studying during the first three months the Gospel of John. Space does not permit of a suitable introduction to that study here, but we trust that no one will fail to read John 20:31, which states the purpose of the apostle in writing.

Three great and fundamental questions are answered in chapter 1:1-18, namely, (1) Was Jesus Christ God or man? (2) Does it matter how we regard him and relate our lives to him? (3) Is there suitable evidence upon which we may rest our faith in him?

I. Jesus Christ Is God (John 1:1-5).

"In the beginning" of Genesis 1:1, Jesus Christ already "was" not only "with God," but he "was God." He is the living "Word," the complete and final revelation of God. He is infinite, eternal, divine, both the Creator and Redeemer. He is both the Life and the Light of men. That Light shines in the darkness but the darkness does not comprehend it.

II. Men Are Either Believers or Unbelievers (vv. 6-13).

There are only two classes of people who will read these lines—the saved and the unsaved. What a solemn thought! To which class do I belong?

The Lord of Glory, the Creator of all things, came to his own world and it "knew him not" (v. 10). How tragic is that fact, but how much deeper is the stab of the next verse, his own people "received him not." The Light still shines in the world, and it is still all too true that men love "darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil" (John 3:19). Such men are lost, "dead in trespasses and sin" (Eph. 2:1).

But, thank God, there are those who "receive him" (v. 12), and to them he gives the power or authority, to be the sons of God. This change is expressly declared to be a. Not by reason of family, or heredity, "not of blood"; b. Not by natural instinct or development, not "of the will of the flesh"; and

c. Not by human volition or will power, not "of the will of man, but of God."

These are important matters and some one may well ask, "What evidence is there for these things?" Faith is not a venture into the dark. We have the strongest of all foundations in the sure Word of God. The evidences of Christianity are many, thoroughly full, and satisfying to any honest inquirer. We refer to but one.

III. Our Faith Rests on the Testimony of Eye Witnesses (vv. 14-18).

John the Baptist and John the Apostle both beheld the "glory as of the only begotten of the Father" in the One who as the "Word was made flesh and dwelt among" them.

The law was "given by Moses" (v. 17), that is, God sent the law through a human messenger. "But grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." No messenger, no matter how great or worthy, would do to bring the gospel of the grace of God. His only begotten Son brought it; it came by him.

Simple, Elegant, Practical

TIME and Sew-Your-Own fashions march on. Today's trio have the simplicity, elegance and practicality so vital to the up-to-the-minute well-groomed woman—and so within reach of the modern, progressive members of The Sewing Circle.

Pattern 1812—Little Miss Two-To - Five can manage her own dressing with the aid of this frock that buttons down the front. She will be the picture of daintiness too, with such clever aids as princess lines, puff sleeves and an intriguing little collar. The one piece step-in is the essence of practicality—a great boon to the youngster's comfort. This ensemble is available in sizes 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. Size 3 requires 2½ yards of 35 or 39 inch fabric and ¾ yard contrasting.

Pattern 1918—This new dress "belongs" in almost any company. Its great simplicity will endear it to homemakers, and business women alike. It is a combination of charm, good lines and youthfulness. You'll want two versions of this style — one with short sleeves, the other with long. Pique, silk crepe or velveteen will serve nicely as the material. It is available in sizes 34, 36, 38,

Black Walnut

Black walnut stumps are used in the manufacture of veneer. To be valuable a stump must have a wavy or irregular grain called "figure," which is most often present in the wood at the curved portion at the base of the tree where the roots extend out from the trunk. This figure, is discernible in the standing tree, is generally indicated by irregular bark ridges or by a rigid surface under the bark. Figured stumps are required to have a minimum diameter of 21 or 22 inches at the upper end and a length of at least 3 feet.
